

Tim: I have an appointment with Mr. Matsumoto this afternoon. Do you know how to get to his company from Shibuya Station?

Kumi: Sure. The easiest way would be to take the Hanzomon Line to Nagatacho and transfer to the Nanboku Line. It'll take you directly to ABC Station, and his office is about five minutes on foot from there.

Tim: How do I get to his office from ABC Station?

Kumi: Let me see. First, you take the exit on the right-hand side of the ticket gate. Then, when you get to street level, cross the street and go left. After walking two blocks or so, you'll see a convenience store. Turn right at the next corner. His office is in the third building from that corner, on the left-hand side.

Tim: What does the building look like?

Kumi: It's a 12-story, fairly new building. Actually, the building itself doesn't have any distinctive features, but you'll be able to tell because you'll see their company logo near the entrance. You won't miss it.

Tim: Great. How long would it take to get from Shibuya to his office?

Kumi: I'd say give yourself about 40 minutes — or 50, just to be safe.

Tim: OK. Thanks a lot!

Kumi: No problem.
