

Receiver: US Motors, Japan Branch, Human Resources. How may I help you?

Caller: Hello, I'm calling to inquire about the job advertisement on the Work-navi website. Is this the right number?

Receiver: Yes. I'll answer any questions you may have.

Caller: Thank you. First, I'd like to ask about one of the qualifications, the three years experience in a publicity division. Does this mean applicants should have three years of actual work experience in advertising?

Receiver: That's right. Please describe your line of business in your resume.

Caller: OK. The other question is about the first interview. Since I currently live in Osaka, would it be possible for you to interview me by telephone instead of me having to go there?

Receiver: I'm afraid that's not possible. You'll have to come to our headquarters in Tokyo.

Caller: I understand. That's all. Thank you very much.

Receiver: Thank you for inquiring. Have a nice day.

Caller: You too. Bye.
